way, Assistant Passenger Agent of the Kingston & Pembroke, press representatives and a number of citizens and also Rev. W. F. Fitzgerald, rector of St. Paul's Church, went to the scene of the accident and waited on the injured. Automobiles and vehicles raced out Sydenham road. In the meantime the passengers who had escaped set to work to make things as comfortable as possible for the injured.

Mrs. H. Jackson, of Moscow, was travelling on the train accompanied by her three-year-old child. They were thrown up against the side of the car and later taken out by Mr. V. M. Beattie of the Canadian Northern Railway. Both escaped without a scratch.

Mr. Benjamin was first to find Mrs. Brown, who was lying on one of the ventilators and evidently had struck against one of the lamps in the car. Mrs. Brown was then unconscious. He carried her out as soon as he could, but she had received fatal injuries and she passed away a few minutes after.

ALL VICTIMS ON SAME SIDE.

Mrs. Fahland was sitting on the same side of the coach as Mrs. Brown, also Mrs. Yourex. All those injured were sitting on the same side. Mrs. Benjamin received a bad shaking up, as did also Mr. Beattie, who helped in the rescue work, but he had no bones broken.

The remains of Mrs. Brown were taken in charge by James Reid & Company. Mrs. Fahland, who was suffering a great deal of pain, was taken to the Hotel Dieu in an ambulance. She is an elderly woman. Her arm was broken and her head also injured.

H. B. Sherwood, Superintendent of the Bay of Quinte Railway, arrived in the city this afternoon from Napanee and went to the scene of the accident. An inquest was opened to-night by Coroner Ross, but was adjourned.

WHY DON'T YOU MAKE A WILL?

Don't think you have nothing to leave. Don't dread lawyer's fees.
 No matter how little you have, it may cause all kinds of unexpected trouble after your decease. For the small sum of 35c, you yourself, in your own home, can make a will that will stand in any court in the land.
 This will has been thoroughly tested in our courts, and is unbreakable.
 Protect your family from trouble by sending for this form to-day. You may regret your neglect later on.
 A Bax Legal Will Form, together with full and simple directions, and sample will can be obtained from A.
 E. Paul, Napanee, or will be mailed to anyone on the receipt of 35c, by the Bax Will Form Co., Room 232, 280
 College street, Toronto.

A special despatch to the Globe
 Monday night from Winnipeg says:
 "Warm and fine is the weather report in the whole west to-day, and threshing is proceeding at a rate never before known in this part of the country. Wheat shipments heavy and the big lot of cars stacked up to sidings all over the country for the past few weeks will soon be depleted. Railway officials declare their efforts to keep cars moving with grain is the greatest ever known, but the outpour of grain from the separators will swamp them before long."

Are You Using an Oil Stove?

LETTERS IN EVIDENCE.

Roosevelt-Harriman Correspondence Examined In Enquiry.

Washington, Oct. 1.—All the correspondence between President Roosevelt and the late E. H. Harriman, covering the period from Mr. Roosevelt's succession to the office in 1901 until Mr. Harriman's differences with him in 1906, was placed in evidence yesterday before the Senate committee investigating campaign expenditures.

Out of the scores of letters covering every subject from exhibits of Indian pictures to the appointment of federal judges and territorial governors in Arizona, the Senate committee was able to secure little new light bearing upon the subject of campaign contributions or the disputed question of whether or not President Roosevelt had specifically asked Mr.
Harriman in 1904 to raise a fund of $240,000 for the aid of his campaign.

C. C. Tegethoff, now agent for the Harriman estate, and former private secretary to Mr. Harriman, and C. A.
Peabody, president of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., and personal attorney for Mrs. Harriman in the administration of the estate, both testified that Mr. Harriman had told them the raising of the big campaign fund had been undertaken at President Roosevelt's request, a statement which Mr. Harriman made before his death, but which was denied by President Roosevelt.

Aside from the file of letters given the committee, no documentary evidence was offered, however, and out of the many letters, none was produced except that written by Mr. Harriman, to Sidney Webster, Jan. 2, 1906, that in any way bore upon the charge that President Roosevelt had asked the railroad man to raise funds.

Clerk Who Lost Twenty-Six Thou-

Toronto, Oct. 1.—Arthur R. Richmond pleaded guilty in the sessions yesterday to the theft of $26,089.73 from the Bank of Toronto, and was sentenced to four years in Kingston Penitentiary by Judge Denton.

"This young man is the victim of a well-known race track shark," declared Mr. T. C. Robinette, in pleading for mercy on Richmond's behalf.
"This man is well known to track followers in all the large cities. He got this young man out to dinner, and by the aid of two fake jockeys, and some fake telegrams from supposed horse owners, inveigled him into stealing this money to play on "sure things."
Of course, he lost, and he now pleads guilty to the theft."

Richmond is 27 years of age, and the son of a Gaspe clergyman. He is a well-educated young man, having spent five years in Bishops' College at Lennoxville, Que. He first went into the Bank of Toronto's service in Montreal, later at Hastings, Ont., and finally came to the Elm street branch in Toronto, where the theft occurred.

All the money appropriated by Richmond was taken inside of a period covering two weeks, and it all went "on the ponies." "He hasn't one cent of money left at the present time. He hasn't a dollar in the world," declared his counsel. "He has told me that after serving sentence, he will go west and make a new name for himself."

the conditions will be the departure of the Minister. The Minister denied last night the Government had received information, either from Bulgaria and Serbia and Serbia is impressed.

Oct. 1.—At the sitting of the delegation yesterday Count Holtdt, the Foreign Minister, asked whether it was true that orders had been issued to mobilize and Sofia, replied: "At the present we have only issued an order for mobilization was issued yesterday. No information of a mobilization has yet reached us from Athens, although the situation in these places cannot be deemed serious."

"I point out," continued the Minister, "that between the mobilization and the hostilities there are the efforts of the great powers, being directed towards all dangers arising from such mobilization. The powers will continue the maintenance of peace."

Preparations in Serbia.

Servia, Oct. 1.—War preparations are being carried on with haste. General mobilization of the Serbian army has been ordered and expected will be well under way in a few hours. The publication of military movements is forbidden.

to newspaper reports, the Minister of Turkey, Dr. Nenas, left Constantinople for and is seething with excitement. The railway stations are full of uniformed men on their way to the front. The mobilization of the Serbian army simultaneously of Servia has added enthusiasm to the occasion.

Stehina has been summoned Thursday in extraordinary session.

Ships Leave Turkish Waters.
Oct. 1.—A Constantinople dispatch says that all Greek vessels have been ordered to leave Turkish waters.

Serbian relations have become tense. Turkey apologized to the firing by Turkish troops on the steamer Rumoli.

A Serbian proclamation of mobilization has, on the other hand, added fuel to the Balkan fire.

The eastern situation is complicated. Diplomats here are serious, although officials do not seem to be optimistic. This is widely shared in consequence of the lateness of the season and the fact that the powers are working in tendering advice to the States to keep the peace. Many Fears Worst.

Oct. 1.—The German Foreign is prepared for the worst since the issue of the orders in Servia and Bulgaria. The possibility is taken into account, however, that the order issued for tactical purposes will bring pressure to bear on the powers.

The aims of Servia and Bulgaria in mobilizing their own forces is thought war may possibly be brought about without a formal declaration.

The powers, however, none of them, will continue their efforts to prevent it until the last

Aldermen Contradict Schreiter.

Detroit, Oct. 1.—Testifying in their own behalf at the preliminary hearing yesterday, seven of the seventeen Detroit aldermen charged with conspiracy, denied the testimony of their co-defendant, Edward Schreiter, former council clerk, that they had accepted or promised to accept bribes from a detective believing at the time that the money had been offered them as payment for alleged councilmanic favors to be tendered the Wabash Railroad.

Their evidence completed the hearing. Judge Jeffries announced that he will make public his decision on Friday.

The aldermen who took this stand were O'Brien, Watson, Merritt, Koenig, Zoeller and Lynch. Some declared they had never met Detective Brennan, who previously testified he conducted the so-called graft investigation and found a number of aldermen susceptible to bribes. Others testified they had been approached, but refused to consider his proposition.

Not Permanent Policy.

Vancouver, Oct. 1.—Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, makes the following statement regarding the Laval question:

"The members of the Dominion Parliament called for November, two months earlier than intended, is for the special purpose of enabling Premier Borden to make a pronouncement on the navy question. Not with the idea of framing a permanent policy, which will be dealt with later, and which in due course will be submitted to the people, but for the purpose of presenting the view of the Government as formed after the recent conference with the British Government and the Admiralty."

Ready to Start Trial.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 1.—"Nothing less than the sudden illness of half of the defendants can cause delay," said U. S. District Attorney Charles W. Miller yesterday, as indicating the Government's readiness to begin the trial of the 51 present and former labor union officials on a charge of conspiracy in the carrying of dynamite and nitro-glycerine on passenger trains.

Two sets each of fifty veniremen have been drawn from throughout Indiana for the selection of a jury. The defence is to be allowed a total of ten and the prosecution a total of six peremptory challenges.

Brantford Has 25,377.

Brantford, Oct. 1.—Brantford jumped in population 1,233 during the year, according to figures submitted by the assessment department here last night, the population of the city now being 25,377.

If the effort to annex the suburban district is successful, the population will be over the 30,000 mark.

The increase in assessment during the year was over two million dollars.

Funeral To-day.

Toronto, Oct. 1.—In the village of Omeme, seven miles from Peterboro, the remains of the five people who were drowned in Pigeon Creek on Saturday will be buried this afternoon. Rev. F. Wilkinson, rector of St. Peter's Church, Toronto, where the McCaffrey family worshipped, will assist in the funeral service. A number of friends and members of the church left for Omeme this morning.

Chicago Business Men Have Stolen Money, Say the Police.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Information that $170,000 of the money stolen from the Bank of Montreal at New Westminster may be now in possession of two men, one a well-known business man here, was given Assistant Chief Schuettler by Jeannette Little. She is the reputed wife of Jim Stacey, under arrest in St. Louis in connection with the robbery. She said the two had the money, or at least the knowledge of where it is. The identity of the business man is kept secret by the police.

The second man implicated by the woman is said to have a criminal record. The police are searching for both. The business man is reported to have disappeared after the search for the bank robber became hot. Detectives say that the woman has only begun her revelation and that through her they may round up the entire gang.

Tighten Grip on Stacey.

St. Louis, Oct. 1.—To prevent the possible release of James W. Stacey, alias Frank West, alias "Doc" Danzell, on a writ of habeas corpus, the police here yesterday applied for a fugitive warrant charging the man wanted in connection with the $271,000 Canadian bank robbery case with attacking Police Lieut. B. J. Burns in Chicago two weeks ago.

The discovery of a memorandum book in the room formerly occupied by the suspect, and Jeannette Little, the woman arrested at Edwardsville, Ill., will aid, it is believed, in capturing other members of the gang.

How The Body Kills Germs.

Germs that get into the body are killed in two ways—by the white corpuscles of the blood, and by a germ-killing substance that is in the blood. Just what this substance is, we do not know. The blood of a healthy person always has some germ-killing substance in it to ward off the attack of disease. The fountain head of life is the stomach. A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished. To put the body in healthy condition, to feed the system on rich, red blood and throw out the poisons from the body, nothing in the past forty years has excelled Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a pure glyceric extract (without alcohol), of bloodroot, golden seal and Oregon grape root, stone root, mandrake and queen's root with black cherrybark.

J. H. MARTIN, Esq.

"My husband was a sufferer from stomach trouble and impure blood," writes Mrs. JAMES H. MARTIN, of Frankfort, Ky. "He had a sore on his face that would form a scab which would dry and drop off in about a month, then another would immediately form. It continued this way for a long time. He tried every remedy that any one would suggest but found no relief. He then tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which completely cured him. He has stayed cured now for two years, and I recommend this valuable medicine for impurities of the blood."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules.

Summer Banking Scheme to Provide for the Fall Wardrobe.

BEING FITTED BY PROXY.

A Trained Nurse's Idea For Protecting the Top and Bottom Rails of Handsome Brass Beds—Hopeless Prevalence of Boredom.

My Dear Elsa—I've hit on a fine plan for saving money. You know that in a few weeks the melancholy days of autumn will be here that bring with them an awful sense of dilapidation in one's wardrobe. Literally when I get back from the summer's wanderings abroad I haven't a rag that is presentable to wear.

To forestall this dreary Flora McFlimsey state I have instituted a home savings bank system. It's this: I have two miniature banks. One I keep in my bedroom, and one I have installed in the butler's pantry. The use of two banks saves me a lot of steps, for when downstairs I can drop my mite into the three coin registering bank, which rings once, twice or five times, according to the amount of the coin deposited.

The bedroom bank is really a very ornamental affair of gold striped Japanese steel, brass trimmed. These money saving contrivances, besides registering the amount dropped into them, lock and unlock automatically.

I put in my banks only the money I can actually save by an economy like walking, when otherwise I might be inclined to take a car, or doing without an ice cream soda, when I would like most awfully to "blow" myself. These pesky old money grabbers also absorb my candy pennies, and when I deny myself some chocolate coated caramels or favorite sweet I mentally picture that I am adding an attractive new feature to my fall wardrobe by this self denial. It's a heap more satisfactory than to be confronted by

And the hopeless part about it is that there are really no cures for "ennui" as there are for almost every other disease, except in exceptional cases where an automobile tour has a good effect.

You see I'm in a pessimistic mood, and in this frame of mind I feel that modern life is merely a conspiracy against the life that really matters. Most of use are more interested in the things that don't actually matter—superficial things—than with those that really count. Of course the life that counts is equally near to us did we but heed it, and far more satisfying did we but know how, but how few of us ever try!

EVERLASTING YEAST.

An Excellent Recipe That Has Been In Use For Years.

A special cooking of potatoes for yeast is never necessary if the water in which potatoes are cooked for a meal is saved. Instead of draining into the sink, strain the proportion of five cupfuls of potato water over one-half cupful of sugar. When cool add a starter of yeast foam, or by keeping in a warm place, such as the top of the warming oven, in two or three days it will ferment without aid, a white foam appearing on the top, when it can be placed in a jar and kept cool.

Use no other liquid for bread. Three and one-half cupfuls will make three loaves of bread. The yeast can be added to from time to time by saving the potato water, adding sugar and when cool putting into the yeast jar. In this way the yeast keeps indefinitely, with no extra work, and is always ready for use. Always save a cupful for a starter. Yeast with the starter can be made at noon and be ready to make bread at night.

PRESS COMMENTS.

Ottawa Citizen—Unless atmospheric conditions change very soon, and the farmers are given a living chance, there will be nothing short of a rain of terror.

Berlin Telegraph—The Laurier naval program is still the best solution of the problem of relieving the mother country of a share of its naval burdens and discharging our obligations to the Empire.

Toronto News—Mr. Roosevelt's gains from the democratic ranks will not be inconsiderable, and the November elections may easily see him chosen president for a third term.

Ottawa Free Press—If these Ulster Orangemen and the militant suffragettes would only join forces they would make the liveliest kingdom in the world since Babylon.

Kingston Whig—The railway commission of Ontario does not give a hoot for the public. And the public do not give a hoot for it. It is one of Whitney's boss failures and the sooner he ends its miserable existence the better.

Hamilton Times—President Curry, of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, in his address at the annual meeting, deplored the small volume of the export trade. He should know that protection does not encourage foreign trade.

Victoria Times—Ever since he got back home Mr. Borden has utilized every speech to talk about Canada as "a nation." In Laurier that used to be called treason by people who now cheer it till their lungs give out. No use talking a change does good.

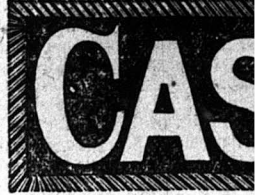

London Advertiser—Sir Richard Cartwright was a richer man when he entered politics fifty years ago than when he died. But no one ever heard him complain that he had not had the worth of his money in serving the public, even though out of office most of the time.

Toronto Telegram—Canadians who admire Hon. R. L. Borden without ceasing to respect themselves bid their country's premier God-speed as he goes forward to prove that his government will be as fruitful in deeds that cost money as every government has been in talk that costs nothing.

Rowell in Toronto—We will pass on to the mother country and see the mother of us all groaning under the burden of maintaining this empire, taxing her citizens in order to maintain it. As Canadians, as self-respecting, liberty-loving, virile people, shall we not say the time has come when we must bear our share and we must take up our burden with you.

MR. MARSHALL HALL

Is as Ready Upon the Po form as In the Co

To inaugurate the new the Playgoers' Club, above square Tube static number of members of the profession were entertained in the handsome premises of E. Marshall Hall, K.C., sided. The son of Dr. Alf well-known Brighton doctor shall Hall was born fifty ago. He was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, he graduated B.A., and became a member of the ple, whence he was called in 1883.

In connection with Mr. Hall's experiences the story is told. When the his candidature for the position was under consideration were being made to George Pilkington, the father, to join the Liberal Mr. Marshall Hall went for a holiday. When the most missed the train, but in time. He has a warning, he says. Then as the

that I am adding an attractive new feature to my fall wardrobe by this self denial. It's a heap more satisfactory than to be confronted by an empty paper candy box as the only reminiscence of squandered shekels after the confectionery has been eaten.

If I have a dollar or so left over from fall gowns, etc., I'm going to put it in one of the new dress forms that the shops are carrying. Every woman knows what it is to feel like dropping in her tracks from standing to have frocks fitted. You know what a slow, nerve racking process it is. But cheer up, sister, for there's comfort ahead—an invention that does away with this torture. The dress form to which I refer can be adjusted to exactly duplicate your figure. The bust can be made any size you want it, also the hips. We all have one defect or another. Possibly one arm is longer than the other, or it may be a hip is the faulty member. Even these defects can be duplicated in the new dress form, and the lovely part of the whole thing is one form will do for the entire family. The makers of this rare and radiant device say that it does not get out of order and that it will last indefinitely. Another advantage is that it can be folded up and put away when not in use.

I am getting very practical these days, and at the risk of boring you I am going to suggest another contrivance. This time a trained nurse was the clever inventor. The patient she was nursing was particularly fussy concerning the welfare of her handsome brass bed and became nervous when callers touched the rail at top and bottom for fear the perspiration from their hands would dim the metal. Personally I have no sympathy with such fussiness, but there are others. Well, to protect the rail this young nurse cut strips of canton flannel that were just the length of the top rail of the head and foot boards and wide enough to cover them. These she has fitted with tape on each side, and she ties them ever so neatly over the cherished rails. The covers are easily laundered when they are soiled.

For guest rooms a less practical but more slightly cover for the rails would be glazed organdie, cut in strips long and wide enough to slip over snugly and sewed at the ends to avoid tying. This papery organdie is very perishable, but in a place where so little wear comes as in a guest room it is practical enough, and it is so transparent that it detracts little from the sheen of the brass. The canton flannel covers are advisable for sickrooms at any season of the year.

Talking about boredom, did you ever stop to think how wonderfully prevalent it is in this modern world? It sometimes seems that most of us devote most of our time nowadays to avoid being bored. I do the most absurd things to dodge this dreadful fate. At one time "ennui" was the special misfortune of the leisure class, but nowadays it is no longer a privilege—it is a common heritage.

APRON OF BLUE DENIM.

An Inexpensive Soup.

Many people think soup is a luxury and cannot be a part of dinner probably more than once a week. Following is a recipe for a soup which, besides being very inexpensive, is very beneficial and will prove a boon to people suffering from loss of appetite:

After lunch put one-half pound of barley in two quarts of water, add a little salt and let simmer for two hours. About one and one-half hours before dinner slice into the barley and water one good sized raw carrot and one small onion, sliced fine. About one-half hour before taking from fire add two teaspoonfuls of worcestershire sauce.

This is exceptionally good and well worth a trial. Barley costs 5 cents, carrot 2 cents, onion 2 cents, worcestershire sauce 1 cent, total 10 cents. It will give as much nutriment to the system as 40 cents' worth of meat.

Two New Ideas.

If you wish to give your lingerie frock the very latest whim of the fashion realm add narrow bands of brown fur. These bands of fur edging founcers and drapery of the most transparent and filmy net and chiffon dresses were one of the most marked features of the drag race at Auteuil. It is one of those curious combinations in which the French revel, but at the same time it is effective.

Another popular fancy is the scarf of malines attached to the gown on one shoulder and thrown around the figure in artistic abandon. In fact, malines will be found surprisingly useful in refreshing slightly worn gowns, whether used as scarf, neck ruche, sash or finishing the sleeves. There is now a waterproof malines on the market which neither the dampness of the shore nor an unexpected shower can wilt.

Saskatoon Phoenix—With all the vast natural resources of the United States behind them, the steel industries could not come within hundreds of thousands of dollars of the British tenders for heavy projectiles for use in the United States navy. Yet the same firms can enter the British market and secure orders from the British Government. Such is the result of high protection.

Montreal Gazette—According to Mr. White, minister of finance, the failures of the Ontario bank and the Farmers' bank might have been averted had there been proper audit of their accounts. This is equivalent to saying that the directors did not properly understand and discharge their duties. Men who have the care of much of others money confided to them should both know what should be done in connection therewith and see that it is done.

Toronto Mail—Fifteen hundred New York school children refused to go to school, broke windows, hurled abuse and heavier missiles at caretakers and trustees, and produced a fair-sized riot because they disapproved of the transfer of some teachers. It is to be feared that these imps were not receiving the right sort of education and that something even more radical than a transfer of teachers is needed if they are to be civilized.

London Advertiser—Sir Richard Cartwright's last utterance on public questions was a statement to the Ottawa Free Press last Thursday, that Canada has for years had all the advantages of the British consular service which his successor now pretends to have secured for the first time. Mr. Foster has obtained no benefits that were not obtained by Sir Richard as minister of commerce. All this splurge about Mr. Foster's imperial achievement is made to look rather foolish.

Vancouver Sun—We are to be honored with visits from all those members of Mr. Borden's Cabinet who have not yet been in the west and with visits from some of those who have. According to present arrangements they will all be with us some time during the fall or early winter. These colleagues of Mr. Borden will complete the campaign which was begun by the Unionists, who, masquerading as Imperialists, were nothing more or less than advocates of the Conservative Government in this country.

Similkameen Star—Added to the high cost of food comes high taxation and a high civilization. The burden of maintaining the Government, paying subsidies to railway companies that never live up to their promises, and agreements, providing education, and building of roads, etc., all tend to increase the burden of the taxpayer. Taxation that produces best results and sits lightest on the people is based on the principle that every taxpayer should benefit in proportion to the amount of taxes he pays. At present many anomalies exist in the levying of taxes, chief of which is in the valuation of land and property.

Summer Is Going.

Soon to pleasant summer days
There will come an end.
Soon the mellow autumn haze
With the hills will blend.
Chill will grow the wind and keen,
With a hint of wrath.
Soon the hoarfrost will be seen Lying on the path.

Every day the sun severe Loses interest
In the things a-doing here
As he travels west.
Southward, too, each day he goes
Moving down the line,
While the changing leaves disclose
Autumn's gay design.

Summer stays with us awhile,
Pleasant as can be;
Teaches us to gayly smile,
Sport with wind and sea;
Then her leafy wings she spreads
For another goal,
Leaving us to vex our heads

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

OMARIZING.

Oh, life is vain,
And love is fleeting,
But griefs remain
To give us greeting.
So here's adieu
To sulking sorrow.
Nor I for you
Will trouble borrow.

Farewell to care
And trouble dreary!
Upon the square,
Of woe we're weary.
No more we'll sigh
O'er teeming trouble.
Bid sorrows fly
And pleasures double.

No more we'll care
For brief remissions,
But, free as air,
We'll go where bliss is.
Who sorrows sore
Is dull and stupid.
So pledge once more
The young god Cupid.

Such sentiments
Are sure alluring,
One's common sense
They'll be immuring.
They sound, it's true,
As sweet as clover,
But, Omar, who Could put it over?

The Answer.

"And you don't think she's beautiful?"

"No."

"But she has a good complexion."

"Perfectly good."

"And a wealth of hair."

"Oh, a bushel."

"Then what's the answer?"

"She's rich."

Truly Corking.

"What sort of time did you have?"

"A perfectly corking time."

"That's fine."

"No; it wasn't."

"Why not?"

"She made us so mad that we had just to sit still and bottle up our anger."

Room For Pity.

"I am awfully sorry for Perkins' baby."

"Why? Is there anything the matter with it?"

"Yes; something very serious."

"Mercy! What is it?"

"It looks like its dad."

CREEPING TREE.

Tropical Growths Which Develop Natural Bridges.

Very familiar objects in forests are the remarkable bush-ropes, so-called because stems have developed into ropes or cables. There is a for this style of growth in the luxuriant growth of the every green plant a place is a necessity. It must have if it cannot get light it continuous and rampant tropical forests constantly choke and smother the slender and the enormous length of ing tendrils is but the keen struggle for light and Thwarted at one point by foliage, it seeks the line of resistance, some times creeping within easy distance of the but ever and always climbing the sun. The consequence is equatorial forests are a tangle of stout rope-like creeper lattice adjoining trees, and loops and natural bridges.

In the region of the Congo West Africa, also in western and in the impenetrable for Congo, the Liana is represented by various kinds of Landolphia of rubber-bearing trees which furnishes nearly all rubber derived from Africa rubber "vines" climb over trees, sometimes to a height of feet above the ground, hanging in great loops like cables.

The flowers of these Lianas are deliciously scented, white, with a golden centre, unlike in shape the flowers of the periwinkle. The foliage is dark green, and the large fronds they bear are brightly colored. Rubber is a sticky sap, which from the lining between bark and the inner core of fiber. To obtain the valuable duct, the natives cut the in sections, strip off the bark until the whole of the is extracted.

Muscular Labor M.

In the next general election John Redmond will have unusual experience of finding for an English member of the House of Commons.

James O'Grady, the muscular man, who at present represents Leeds, has come into conflict with the official Liberal organization constituency, with the result that he has had notice to quit. It was that he denounced the Liberal over its attitude to the strike. Although there is an Irish element in Leeds, O'Grady stands no chance without Liberal support.

As his name implies, he is a man, although, as he himself did not enjoy the blessing of being born in the Emerald Isle. He saw the light in Bristol, a Home Rule propagandist long before Parnell or Redmond stood alone to preach that gospel.

"Jim" O'Grady has in the more to educate the English cracy in regard to the grip Ireland than any Anglo-Irish for that reason John Redmond see that he will not lose his seat in the House of Commons. Rule becomes a reality before the next election, T. P. O'Connor the Irish Government, and in

Hennequin's Infant Tablets

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—MR. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIDDLE, Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prepay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. Hennequin Tablets have the letter "H" stamped upon them—this is your guarantee. All dealers, 25c per package, or 5 for $1.00 sent postpaid to any address.

BIG SHIP BUILDING

The Planning and Constructing of an Ocean Liner.

FIRST A MINIATURE IS MADE.

This Small Model is Then Thoroughly Tested, and the Story it Tells When Perfected Will Be the Story of the New Vessel When Launched.

Building a modern ocean liner is an interesting and complicated operation. The ship's plan is first prepared in sections from owners' specifications, on a scale of a quarter or half an inch to the foot. One set of drawings, called the "sheer draft," is a plan of the ship's skeleton or framework without the plates, the internal deck, bulkhead and hold arrangements being indicated by a series of detailed drawings.

Follows then the experimental stage. A wooden block or casting of paraffin wax is first made to scale from the ship's plans and tested in a large tank about 300 feet in length and eight feet deep. The model, weighted to the load line, is towed to and fro by an overhead traverser at varying speeds.

Delicate instruments register the exact "pull," the displacement, the stability and a host of other information. The shape of the model is altered again and again, pieces being shaved off here and others there. The final results are carefully tabulated, and from this ship in embryo the builders complete their plans.

Inside the central shed, 250 yards long and 150 feet in height, the ship's berth has meantime been prepared. Thousands of wooden piles, about thirty feet in length, have been driven by pile drivers deep into the ground. On these are laid huge beams and the floor completed with stout planks. Then in the center the keel blocks, surmounted by oak caps in groups of five, are assembled on a falling gradient to the river of about half an inch a foot.

All is now ready for the reception of the ponderous keel. This—the backbone of the ship—is of huge strength, measuring four feet across, and is three and a quarter inches thick. Parallel with the keel, but above it and attached by angle bars, is the central girder, five feet high, the space between forming the double bottom. On each side, at regular distances running lengthwise, are seven other girders, the outer one called the "margin plate."

The water tight chambers are formed by vertical partitions of plates extending above and beneath the floors up to the margin plate on each side.

After the great cast steel stern frame and the stem bar for the bows have been attached the plating begins. The steel strips of varying sizes, but averaging thirty-four feet in length and about three tons in weight each, which form the skin of the ship, are laid on in strakes like the bricks in a wall. Fitting these strakes to the shape of a ship is a critical business. A thin wooden pattern or template is first prepared for each plate and clamped in position on the ship's side. With minute care every detail is marked on

ENTERTAINING THE KING.

What It Cost To Be the Host of Royalty.

King George, like the late King Edward, does everything that lies in his power to prevent undue trouble or expense being incurred by those whom he visits, and everything that savors of ostentation is most obnoxious to him. At the same time it is necessary that a certain amount of formality should be carefully observed, and all this runs into money. His Majesty, for instance, is invariably accompanied by an Equerry, who, by reason of his position, becomes a member of the house party, while if the Queen travels with His Majesty, her Lady-in-Waiting has likewise to be included among the guests. It is very rarely that the King is attended by more than two body servants; while three maids, as a rule, suffice for Queen Mary's requirements.

It is laid down that His Majesty must upon all occasions have a suite of apartments to himself, and it is desired that these should be as far removed from the rooms of the other members of the house party as possible. A similar suite has to be provided for Queen Mary when she is present. Not many years ago a well-known nobleman who was entertaining the present King for the first time spent over $10,000 in providing a new suite of rooms for His Majesty's occupation.

Wherever it is at all possible, the King also desires that he should be placed in telegraphic and telephonic communication with the royal palaces, so that he may be within easy reach of his secretaries and the chief officials of his household. Most country seats are, of course, to-day, upon the telephone, but the telegraph is a very different matter, and when the late King Edward was once staying in the North of England his host spent $650 to provide a special telegraph wire. His late Majesty, as it happened, only required to make use of it upon one occasion, when he wired exactly eight words to Buckingham Palace—surely the most expensive telegram that was ever dispatched.

Enlivened the Dinner.

When Muzaffar-ed-Din, Shah of Persia, paid his first visit to England he was the guest of King Edward VII., then Prince of Wales. On the evening of his arrival a banquet was held at the palace, and on the menu was asparagus.

As it happened the Shah had never heard of, much less tasted, asparagus till that evening. When the dish was brought on he helped himself to half of it, picked each stalk up in his fingers, nibbled gingerly at the head and then threw the stalk over his shoulder on to the carpet. To have let it remain on his plate would have been a breach of Persian etiquette.

All eyes were turned to the Prince of Wales. What was he going to do?

The prince, tactful as ever, glanced at those about him, then at his plate; then he picked up stalk after stalk, ate what he wanted and threw the balance on the carpet behind his chair.

A moment later thirty people in that room were eating asparagus in Persian fashion. The air was thick with flying stalks, and the attendants, trained to look more serious than ever on such occasions, never batted an eyelash nor moved a muscle.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Balkan war signs failed today to stimulate buying enthusiasm here in wheat. The closing tone was unsettled, with prices varying from 1/4c net decline to 1/4c advance. Corn finished 1/4c to 3/4c off to a rise of 2 1/4c to 2 3/4c, oats 1/4c to 1 1/4c down, and provisions straggling from 2 1/2c loss to a gain of 12 1/2c. The Liverpool market closed yesterday 3/4d higher on wheat, and 1/4d higher on corn.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—There was a good enquiry from the continent for Manitoba spring wheat and some business was worked, but the demand from the United Kingdom was poor. A good business continues to be done in oats and sales of Duluth No. 3 white were made at 50 1/2c, ex-store. A few cars of Ontario oats are coming forward, which are poor in quality and some heated. Manitoba oats are scarce and very firm on spot. The trade in flour is fairly active for local account, but the foreign demand is quiet. A good business is doing in mill-feed at firm prices. Butter is firm under a fair demand. The demand for cheese is quiet and only a small business is passing over the cable. Exports for week were 46,238 boxes, against 62,857 a year ago. Eggs, active.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 23 were 2300 cattle, 4800 sheep and lambs, 3600 hogs and 700 calves. The offerings on the market this morning were 1700 cattle, 4400 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 500 calves.

Owing to the continued limited supply of choice steers coming forward the tone of the market for such was firm and sales of a couple of full loads were made on Saturday to local dealers at $7, for which in a jobbing way they asked as high as $7.50 this morning, and for which

OR FLETCHER S

ship is a critical business. A thin wooden pattern or template is first prepared for each plate and clamped in position on the ship's side. With minute care every detail is marked on it—the size and shape, the overlap and the rivet holes.

It is then transferred to its proto- type, the steel plate, which is cut, punched and bent by wonderful machinery that slices steel strips, punches rivet holes and bends steel plate as easily and cleanly as though the material were paper. Nimble traveling cranes on ganties under the roof pick up the huge plates when ready and convey them to their appointed place, where the hydraulic riveter—a mechanical marvel—with irresistible force and rapidity drives each rivet home. In the building of a modern liner over 4,000,000 rivets are used. Each joint is rendered water tight by calking.

The outer shell finished and the in- side work far advanced, the builders turn their attention to the problem of the launch, the weight of the vessel at this point on the keel blocks being something like 15,000 tons. The launching ways, sloping gently to the water, are prepared, and cradles, fore and aft, to guide the ship, are erected with huge wooden beams, the whole being finally lubricated by tallow and train oil.

Amid acclamation the ship receives its baptism and, whether for weal or woe, takes to its element. Still help- less, though, its motive power lacking, it is afterward moored to the works wharf under a 150 ton titan crane, whereby its boilers—twenty-five of them—are lowered into the abyss of the hold and a multitude of fittings connected with the engines.

Dwarfing all else for size come next the four funnels, towering 150 feet above keel level and large enough for two tramcars to be drawn through abreast. These are fixed on the giantic "uptakes," connecting with the boilers by a network of fines.

A hoist of auxiliary machinery for lighting, ventilating, pumping and steering the ship, as well as the pas- senger lifts, is being installed at the same time as a swarm of men work day and night on the internal decorations. Electricians encircle the ship with a girdle of light and install a telephone and electric call service with 300 stations.

In the chart room is fitted a wonder- ful clock, which controls, synchroni- cally, fifty other clocks in different parts of the ship. The lofty Marconi mast is linked up with the mysterious instruments in the wireless cabin. Then, at last, after many months of toil, comes the welcome day when the great ship, pride of her builders, sails forth upon its trial trip.—London Ad- wergs.

As the days grow shorter somehow it unpleasantly reminds us that we should do our Christmas shopping early.

Busiest Spot on Earth.

The most crowded spot in the world for five and a half days of the week is that small tract of territory, covering one acre, bounded by the Royal Exchange Bank, and the Mansion House in the city of London. It is a veritable human ganglion, says The Strand Magazine. If you were to stretch an invisible thread north and south across this space you would find that in the course of each day no fewer than 500,000 persons passed and re- passed, together with 50,000 vehicles. And the busiest corner of all in this busy acre is immediately outside the Mansion House, for rather more than half the traffic crossing our imaginary boundaries passes that way. The results of a traffic-census taken by the city police show that on an average day some 30,000 vehicles pass this particular corner, while the pedestrian traffic is well over 250,000, and these figures are constantly increasing.

The Wrong Crowd.

Mr. George Grossmith tells this story of when he was performing with his father. On one occasion, instead of beginning the performance at eight o'clock, as advertised, they did not arrive in the town until twenty minutes past that hour. "We dressed in the cab, which flew along like a fire engine. Suddenly we espied a building lighted up and a large crowd coming out. 'Go back, go back!' shouted my father to the crowd as he put his head out of the cab. 'Go back; it is all right—Grossmith is here. We have arrived—go back!' Unfortunately it was not our audience, but a congregation leaving a Methodist chapel after service."

Disputed Authority.

There is a story, told of Drs. Chal- mers and Stewart, who argued on the street corner on some knotty point of theology with Scottish pertinacity until it was time to separate, when one of them remarked, "You will find my views very well put in a certain tract," of which he gave the title, upon which, to his surprise, his an- tagonist replied, "Why, I wrote that tract myself."

What They Meant.

A Scotch clergyman named Fraser claimed the title and estates of Lord Lovat. He tried on the trial of the Lord to establish his title by pro- ducing an ancestral watch on which were engraved the letters S. F. The claimant alleged that these letters were the initials of his ancestor, the notorious Simon Fraser, Lord Lovat, beheaded in 1747 for supporting the young pretender. The letters, engraved under the regulator, were shown to stand for "Slow, Fast," and the case was laughed out of court.

When Coal Was Banned.

It would greatly surprise the aver- age person to-day to hear that by a proclamation of 1306, the use of coal in London was forbidden, so little was it liked. Two and a half centuries later, on the contrary, its value was recognized, and its export in any form prohibited. To-day nothing is so scarce as coal in London. As for col- liers, their pay and conditions of liv- ing to-day are princely when compar- ed with those of many miners in the 18th century.

of choice steers coming forward the tone of the market for such was firm and sales of a couple of full loads were made on Saturday to local dealers at $7, for which in a jobbing way they asked as high as $7.50 this morning, and for which buyers refused to pay and the top price realized was $7.25, while bids of $7 were refused.

The supply of other grades of cattle was larger than it has been for some time past and in consequence the tone of the market was weaker and prices ruled fully 25c per cwt. lower than this day week. Even at this reduction some buyers were disposed to hold off, but on the whole the demand was fairly good, owing to the very cool weather for this time of year. In addition to the buying for local requirements several carloads were bought for shipment to Quebec and other outside points, consequently the trade on the whole was fairly active and a good clear- ance was made by noon. The demand from camers was good and a fair trade was done at a small decline.

A weaker feeling developed in the mar- ket for sheep and lambs, owing to the large receipts and prices were 25c per cwt. lower than this day week, but at this reduction the demand from packers and butchers was good for supplies, and they are all now putting them away for winter requirements and in consequence an active trade was done, with sales of Ontario lambs at $5.75 to $6, and Quebec stock at $5.25 to $5.50 per cwt., while ewe sheep sold at $3.50 to $3.75, and bucks and culls at $3 to $3.25 per cwt. The demand for milk-fed calves was good, of which the supply was small and sales were made at $7 to $7.50 per cwt., while grass- ers sold at $5 to $10 each.

Owing to the increased supplies of hogs coming forward and the lower prices ruling in the Toronto market at the latter end of last week a weak feeling con- tinues to prevail in the local market and prices scored a further decline of 20c to 25c per cwt. since last Wednesday, but at the lower range of prices the demand from packers was good and a brisk trade was done with sales of selected lots at $3.50 to $3.90 per cwt., weighed off the cars, and the prospects were that values would go still lower.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7 to $7.25; me- dium, $4.75 to $5.75; common, $4 to $4.50; canners, $2.50 to $2.75; choice cows, $5.25 to $5.50; medium, $4.50 to $5; bulls, $3 to $4.50; milkers, choice, each, $60 to $70; common and medium, each, $40 to $50; springers, $30 to $35.

Sheep—Ewes, $3.50 to $3.75; bucks and culls, $3 to $3.25; lambs, $5.25 to $6. Hogs—F.o.b., $3.50 to $3.90. Calves—$5 to $10.

Cheese Markets.

CANTON, N.Y., Sept. 30.—There were 350 boxes cheese sold at 16c; 450 tubs butter at 31½c.

UTICA, N.Y., Sept. 30.—The heavy frosts have had their effect on dairy products, another advance being made in cheese and butter prices by the Utica Dairy Board of Trade today. The sales were: 240 boxes of small colored and small white cheese, at 15½c; 180 tubs of butter sold at 31c.

Among the water vehicles the most extraordinary is the catamaran of the Madras fishermen. It consists of three logs lashed together flush with the surface of the water and is prop- elled with a single oar. The cata- maran is really unsinkable and in rough weather could be used when an ordinary boat could not.

SOFT CAKES—Rub one pound and a half of butter into two pounds of flour. Add three dessertspoonful of preserve juice of any desired flavor, six of yeast and four each of ground nutmeg, cinnamon and currants. Bake the cakes in small, shallow pans.

BACON WITH POTATOES—Warm half a pound of smoked bacon, cut in little squares. When the bacon begins to brown, add a cut onion and let it brown. Sprinkle on a spoonful of flour, stir all, add a bowl of soup-stock or of tepid water, and boil a few minutes. Add potatoes cut in pieces, with salt, pepper and thyme. Cover the pan and let it simmer on the side of the stove for half an hour.

MACARON OMELETS—Pound one dozen macarons until fine. Beat six eggs, yolks and whites together, adding during the process the pounded macarons, together with one table-spoonful of confectioner's sugar and a pinch of salt. Make of this mixture four small omelets; fill them with jelly or jam, dust over with confectioner's sugar, brown them in the oven, and serve them hot.

MUSTARD PICKLE—Make a strong brine of salt and water, and pour it boiling hot over two quarts of small cucumbers. Let the cucumbers stand in it twenty-four hours, then drain them. Cut six red or green peppers into inch-square pieces, and soak them in a separate cold brine overnight. Drain them. Cut two quarts of tender celery into inch lengths. Break into bits two quarts of cauliflower, and cut up two quarts of small onions and two quarts of green tomatoes. Let the cauliflower, onions and tomatoes stand all night in a brine composed of one gallon of water and one pint of salt.

In the morning drain off the brine and scald the vegetables in weak vinegar—one part vinegar and two parts water. Drain once more. Make a dressing by mixing thoroughly one-half pound of dry mustard, one table-spoonful of tumeric powder, one tea-spoonful of celery seed, one cupful of flour and two cupfuls of sugar. Add enough vinegar to make a smooth paste; then add one gallon of good cider vinegar. Cook the dressing until it thickens. While it is still boiling hot add all the vegetables except the peppers and celery. Let the mixture boil up well for a minute, then push the kettle to back of stove and add the peppers and celery. If the peppers and celery are added too soon they lose their crispness. The pickle should be kept in sealed jars.

THE DEVIL.

"Kit" in October CANADA MONTHLY

Somebody said from the pulpit lately that there is no Hell. No Hell, no Devil, I suppose, and yet the personality of that irrepressible gentleman is an article of faith with one small person that I know.

A little child aged seven, living under the care of two maiden aunts, got into disgrace with one of the ancient virgins not long ago because she licked the jam off the tips of her fingers at luncheon. She was seen digging in the garden with her little sand spade a few hours later, and the two old ladies watched with much curiosity to see what she was about. Presently she pulled an envelope from her pocket and stuck it in the hole. Then she piled the earth into it and beat it with her little hands. Bye and bye, when the child had said her prayers and gone to bed, Aunt Martha conferred with Aunt Tabitha, and the two curious old daughters of Eve ambled out with little shawls pinned over their heads to see what was in the grave. They dug and dug with those little wooden epitaphs that gardeners stick over seed beds, until they came on the envelope buried deep down. They opened it. There was no address, but the contents were:

"Dear Devil, please come and take away Aunt Tabitha and burn her. You can leave Aunt Martha for a little while."

That child believed in the personality of the Devil.

A fatal accident occurred Tuesday afternoon at the construction work of Marsh & Henthorn, the new foundry being erected in Belleville. A young man, Percy Graves, was assisting in the elevation of a large steel girder, when it fell, pinning Graves beneath it. He was so seriously injured that he expired while being conveyed in an ambulance to the hospital. An inquest will not be held.

THE FREE TESTING OF FARM SEEDS.

During the season of 1912-13, the Seed Branch of the Federal Department of Agriculture will test free of charge samples of seeds of grasses, clovers and cereal crops. This has been the policy of this Branch since the passing of the Seed Control Act. As a guide to growers, dealers and others who desire to have samples tested for purity, grading and germination, a leaflet of instructions has been prepared. Under twenty-three numbered paragraphs there are described, among other things, how to prepare, pack and address samples of various kinds. Useful notes are given on qualities affecting the value of seed. It is pointed out that injury to wheat from frost or dampness is usually apparent in the color and shrunken condition of the grain. While a hulled kernel of sound oats is usually semi-transparent and not brittle, a frosted kernel is dark and mealy, particularly at the tip, and is usually brittle. Instructions are given for cleaning grass and clover seeds, but growers whose farms are not clean are recommended to sell their seed in an unclean condition to a wholesale merchant who has special power cleaners. Persons who desire to have seed tested may procure a copy of this circular by applying for it to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

SAVED BY FAITH NOT NOW BY WORKS

It Is Not of Yourselves; It Is the Gift of God.

Pastor Russell Points Out That Present Age Is the Faith Age—Next Age Will Be the Age of Works—Address to a Large Convention of Bible Students.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 29. — Pastor Russell addressed a large Convention of Bible Students here. He received closest attention. We report one of the discourses from the text, "For by grace ye are saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God."—Eph. 2:8.

The speaker conceded that the subject of faith and its relation to salvation had been considerably confused in the minds of many for centuries. He held, however, that clearer views are now permeating Christian minds and hearts and that the conflict between salvation by faith and salvation by works is at an end. Both are now seen to be necessary. Works devoid of faith could not be perfect nor in any way acceptable to God. Faith without all the works possible to it would not be a living faith but merely passive assent, which is not what God requires of those who would be footstep followers of Jesus. The judgment of the Church determines for each member life or death eternal—and if life, what the degree of glory, honor, Divine favor, "as star differeth from star in glory." Thus St. James points out that a faith which gives no manifestation to do good should be styled a dead faith and would be valueless in God's sight. He demonstrates his argument respecting the necessity of works by reminding us that although Abraham was justified by faith and not by works, nevertheless he was not justified without works; but was required to demonstrate his faith by his works, even though his works were imperfect and could not of themselves have justified him.

Pastor Russell declared the present Age the Age of faith and the oncoming period of Messiah's Kingdom the Age of works. He cautioned his hearers, nevertheless, that, in harmony with what he had already shown in the Scriptures that this would not mean that no works are now required nor that in the future Age no faith would be required. The standard or test now is faith and not works. The standard or test of the next Age will be works, not faith. The reason of this difference, he said, was manifest: because of the fallen condition of the entire race none could do perfect works now, and, if judged by works, all would be condemned afresh. Hence God now in dealing with the Church requires them to walk by faith and not by sight.

In the next Age, during Messiah's reign, he claimed that all the clouds and darkness, all the ignorance and superstition, would pass away before the rising Sun of Righteousness.

A Wonderful Discovery.

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a diseased part, the cells beneath the skin surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming of fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. This tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Company and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema!

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, or we will send free trial box if you send this advertisement and a 1c. stamp (to pay return postage). Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

THE LION AND THE MOUSE, era House, on Thursday, October 10th.

In the next Age, during Messiah's reign, he claimed that all the clouds and darkness, all the ignorance and superstition, would pass away before the rising Sun of Righteousness. As a result faith in the next Age will be a very simple matter. Knowledge will be so great that faith will take second place. Then good works will gradually become the test and mankind will gradually rise out of imperfection of mind and body. All the willing and obedient will be able to do better and better until finally at the time of the close of Messiah's reign, all the willing and obedient will be perfected and able to do perfect works. And their judgment will be according to works. Only the perfect will be granted everlasting life beyond the Messianic Kingdom.

Everything that God has arranged for human salvation is properly said to be of His grace. God is not bound by justice to do anything at all for humanity; therefore whatever is done is of Grace or unmerited favor. The next Age also will indirectly be an Age of Grace in that all the blessings that will go to mankind in the way of earthly restitution will be unmerited, so far as they are concerned. But the Grace of that time will more particularly be the Grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, because all those blessings will come from His having met the demands of Justice on man's behalf. And during the thousand years of His Reign He will be merely giving to mankind that which He purchased with His own sacrifice.

But the present Age is peculiarly one of Divine Grace because the call of the Church and the great blessing she is to receive as the Bride of Christ is something more than was purchased by the death of Jesus. Jesus merely purchased human rights and human nature for mankind by the sacrifice of His own human rights and human nature. God's grace is manifest now in that the Church is called to a glory, honor, immortality, Divine nature, which she never had and never lost and which was never redeemed by Jesus' sacrifice or otherwise.

How shall we understand this statement? Surely God does not exercise faith for us and then consider it something on our part which He is willing to reward. The explanation is this: Faith is possible only where it has a basis of knowledge. In proportion as Divine providence grants us knowledge of Divine things it is possible for us to exercise faith proportionately. And our works in harmony with such faith demonstrate the sincerity and strength of our faith.

The same principle continues throughout this Christian age. Grace opens the way to knowledge. Knowledge paves the way for faith and begetting of the Holy Spirit. Then works to the extent of opportunity should demonstrate the degree and quantity and sincerity and loyalty of the faith.

THE THREE GUARDSMEN

By ALEXANDRE DUMAS

"You are right welcome, my love!"

gigantic "No. 1." D'Artagnan entered the chamber.

Porthos was in bed and was a game at lansquenet with ton to keep his hand in, w loaded with partridges was t fore the fire, and at each large chimney piece, over tv dishes, were boiling two from which exhaled an grateful to the olfactory n addition to this he perceived top of a wardrobe and the a commode were covered w bottles.

At the sight of his friend F tered a loud cry of joy, and ton, rising respectfully, y place to him and went to gi to the two stewpans, of whi peared to have the particul tion.

"Ah, is that you?" said F D'Artagnan. "You are right my dear fellow! I hope you cuse my not coming to r But," added he, looking at D with a certain degree of u "you know what happened t "Not exactly."

"Why, on making a thrust versary, whom I had already times and with whom I mea ish by a fourth, I put my stone, slipped and strained I shall be about again in a f "Why did you not have you veyed to Paris? Living here cruelly wearisome."

"That was my intention, dear friend, I have one thin fess to you. As I had the 7 in my pocket which you had ed to me, in order to amuse invited a gentleman who w ing this way to walk up and

M. Bonacieux accosted him. "Well, young man," said he, "we appear to pass rather gay nights! Seven o'clock in the morning! Peste, you seem to reverse ordinary customs."

"No one can reproach you for anything of the kind, Master Bonacieux," said the young man. "You are a model for regular people."

Bonacieux became as pale as death and grinned a ghastly smile. "Ah, ah!" said he, "you are a jocular companion! But where were you gadding last night, my young master? It does not appear to be very clean in the crossroads."

D'Artagnan glanced down at his boots, all covered with mud, but that same glance fell upon the shoes and stockings of the mercer, and it might have been said they had been dipped in the same mud heap.

Then a sudden idea crossed the mind of D'Artagnan. That little stout man, was Bonacieux himself. The husband had presided over the carrying off of his wife.

A terrible inclination immediately took possession of D'Artagnan to seize the mercer by the throat and strangle him; but, as we have said, he was occasionally a very prudent youth, and he restrained himself. The revolution, however, which had appeared upon his countenance, was so visible, that Bonacieux was terrified at it.

"Ah, ah, but you are joking, my worthy man!" said D'Artagnan. "It appears to me that if my boots want a sponge your stockings and shoes stand in equal need of a brush. May you not have been philandering a little also, Master Bonacieux?"

"Oh, no," said Bonacieux. "Yesterday I went to St. Mande to make some which you said I was gone. So, then, pack up our necessities, Planchet, and let us be off. On my part, I will go out with my hands in my pockets that nothing may be suspected. You can join me at the Hotel des Gardes."

D'Artagnan directed his steps toward the residences of his three friends. No news had been received of them, only a letter, all perfumed, and of an elegant writing in small characters, was come for Aramis. D'Artagnan took charge of it. Ten minutes afterward Planchet joined him at the stables of the Hotel des Gardes. D'Artagnan, in order that there might be no time lost, had saddled his horse himself.

"That's well," said he to Planchet, when the latter added the portmantau to the equipment; "now saddle the other three horses."

"Do you think, then, monsieur, that we shall travel faster with two horses apiece?" said Planchet, with his cunning air.

"No, master joker," replied D'Artagnan, "but with our four horses we may bring back our three friends, if we should have the good fortune to find them living."

Our two travelers arrived at Chantilly without any accident and alighted at the hotel of the Grand St. Martin, the same they had stopped at on their first journey. The host on seeing a young man followed by a lackey with two led horses advanced respectfully to the door. Now, as they had already traveled eleven leagues, D'Artagnan thought it time to stop, whether Porthos were or were not in the hotel. And then perhaps it would not be prudent to ask at once what had become of the musketeer. D'Artagnan gave the handsomest in the hotel, and to be satisfied with a pretty little closet on the third floor. But to this M. Porthos replied, that he every moment expected his mistress, who was one of the greatest ladies of the court. Nevertheless, I thought proper to insist, but he took one of his pistols, laid it on his table day and night and said that at the first word that should be spoken to him about removing he would blow out my brains. So from that time, monsieur, nobody enters his chamber but his servant."

"What! Mousqueton is here, then?"

"Oh, yes, monsieur! Unfortunately he is more nimble than his master and sets us all at defiance. He takes all he wants without asking."

"Porthos will pay you."

"Hum?" said the host in a doubting tone.

"Why, it is not to be imagined that the favorite of a great lady will be allowed to be inconvenienced for such a paltry sum as he owes you."

"If I durst say what I believe on that head, or, rather, what I know!"

"How did you become acquainted with her?"

"Oh, monsieur, if I could believe I might trust in your discretion!"

"Speak. By the word of a gentleman you shall have no cause to repent of your confidence."

"Instead of putting a certain letter in the post, which is never safe, I took advantage of one of my lads being going to Paris, and I ordered him to convey the letter to this duchess himself. This was fulfilling the intentions of M. Porthos, who had desired us to be so careful of this letter, was it not?"

"Nearly so."

the also, Master Bonacieux. "Oh, no," said Bonacieux. "Yesterday I went to St. Mande to make some inquiries after a servant, as I cannot possibly do without one, and the roads were so bad that I brought back all this mud, which I have not yet had time to remove."

The place named by Bonacieux as that which had been the object of his journey was a fresh proof in support of the suspicions D'Artagnan had conceived. Bonacieux had named Mande because Mande was in an exactly opposite direction to St. Cloud. This probability afforded him his first consolation. If Bonacieux knew where his wife was the mercer might at any time by the employment of extreme means be forced to open his teeth and allow his secret to escape.

"I beg your pardon, my dear M. Bonacieux, if I don't stand upon ceremony," said D'Artagnan, "but nothing makes one so thirsty as want of sleep. I am parched with thirst. Allow me to take a glass of water in your apartment. You know that is never refused among your neighbors."

And without waiting for the permission of his host, D'Artagnan went quickly into the house and cast a rapid glance at the bed. The bed had not been slept in.

"Many thanks to you, Master Bonacieux," said D'Artagnan, emptying his glass. "That is all I wanted of you. I will now go up into my room. I will make Planchet brush my boots, and when he has done I will, if you like, send him to you to brush your shoes."

At the top of the stairs D'Artagnan found Planchet in a great fright.

"What's the matter now, Planchet?" "Oh, monsieur, the visit I have received in your absence about half an hour ago while you were at M. de Treville's."

"Who has been here? Come, speak!" "M. de Cavois, the captain of his eminence's guards."

"Did he come to arrest me?" "I have no doubt he did, monsieur, for all his gracious manner. He came, he said, on the part of his eminence, who wished you well and to beg you to follow him to the Palais Cardinal."

"What did you answer him?" "That the thing was impossible, seeing that you were not at home, as he might perceive."

"Well, what did he say then?" "That you must not fail to call upon him in the course of the day, and then he added in a low voice, 'Tell your master that his eminence is very well disposed toward him and that his fortune perhaps depends upon this interview.'"

"The snare is not very skillfully set for the cardinal," replied the young man, smiling.

"Oh, yes; I saw the snare, and I answered you would be quite in despair on your return."

"Where is he gone to?" asked M. de Cavois.

"To Troyes, in Champagne," I answered.

"And when did he set out?" "Yesterday evening."

"Planchet, my friend," interrupted D'Artagnan, "you are really a jewel of a man. In a quarter of an hour we will set off."

"Where are we going, may I ask, without being too curious?"

"In the opposite direction to that

And then perhaps it would not be prudent to ask at once what had become of the musketeer. D'Artagnan gave the horses to the care of his lackey, entered a small room destined to receive such as wished to be alone and desired the host to bring him a bottle of his best wine and as good a breakfast as possible.

D'Artagnan was served with miraculous celerity. The host desired to wait upon him himself, which D'Artagnan perceiving, ordered two glasses to be brought and commenced the following conversation:

"My good host, let us drink to the prosperity of your establishment."

"Your lordship does me much honor," said the host, "and I thank you sincerely for your kind wish. I was thinking that it was not the first time I had had the honor of seeing monsieur."

"I was here only ten or twelve days ago. I was conducting some friends, three or four musketeers, one of whom by the by, had a dispute with a stranger, an unknown, a man who sought a quarrel with him for I don't know what."

"Ah, exactly so," said the host. "I remember it perfectly. Is it not M. Porthos, that your lordship means?"

"Yes; that is my companion's name. I hope nothing has happened to him? He promised to rejoin us, and we have seen nothing of him."

"He has done us the honor to remain here. We are even a little uneasy on account of certain expenses he has been at."

"Well, but whatever expenses he may have incurred I am sure he is in a condition to pay them."

"Ah, monsieur, you infuse balm into my mind. We have been warned."

"Well, can I see Porthos?"

"Certainly, monsieur. Take the stairs on your right; go up the first flight and knock at No. 1. Only warn him that it is you."

"Warn him! Why should I do that?"

"M. Porthos may imagine you belong to the house, and in a fit of passion might run his sword through you or blow out your brains."

"What have you done to him, then?"

"We asked him for money."

"Ah, I can understand that. It is a demand that Porthos takes very ill when he is not in funds; but I know he ought to be so at present."

"We thought so, too, monsieur, as our concern is carried on very regularly, and we make our bills every week, at the end of eight days we presented our account, but at the first word on the subject he sent us to all the devils. It is true he had been playing the day before with some gentleman who was traveling this way, to whom he proposed a game of lansquenet."

"That's it, then; and the foolish fellow has lost all he had."

"Even to his horse, monsieur."

"That's Porthos all over," murmured D'Artagnan.

"Then," continued the host, "I replied that I hoped he would have at least the kindness to grant the favor of his custom to my brother host of the Aigle d'Or, but M. Porthos replied that my hotel being the best, he should remain where he was."

"I confined myself then to begging him to give up his chamber, which is Porthos, who had desired us to be so careful of this letter, was it not?"

"Nearly so."

"Well, monsieur, do you know who this pretended duchess is?"

"I don't know her."

"Why, she is the wife of a lawyer of the Chatelet, monsieur, named Mma. Coquenard; who, although she is at least fifty, still gives herself jealous airs. She flew into a great passion on receiving the letter, saying that M. Porthos was a fickle, inconstant man and that she was sure it was on account of some woman he had received this wound."

"What; has he been wounded, then?"

"Yes, but he has forbidden me so strictly to say so!"

"And why so?"

"Zounds, monsieur, only because he had boasted that he would perforate the stranger with whom you left him in dispute where he pleased, whereas the stranger, on the contrary, quickly brought him on his back. The affair was not long, I assure you. They placed themselves in guard, the stranger made a feint and a lunge and that so rapidly that when M. de Porthos came to the parade he had already three inches of steel in his breast. Upon which the stranger asked his name, and, learning that it was Porthos and not M. D'Artagnan, he assisted him to rise, brought him back to the hotel, mounted his horse, and disappeared. I have not seen him since."

"Well, well," said D'Artagnan, "Porthos will pay you with the money of the Duchess Coquenard."

"Oh, monsieur! She positively answered that she was tired of the exigencies and infidelities of M. Porthos and that she would not send him a denier."

"And did you convey this answer to your guest?"

"We took good care not to do that. He would have found out how we had delivered the letter."

"So that he is still in expectation of his money?"

"Oh, yes, monsieur! Yesterday he wrote again, but it was his servant who this time put his letter in the post."

"Do you say the woman is old and ugly?"

"Fifty at least, monsieur, and not at all handsome, according to Pathaud's account."

"In that case you may be quite at ease. She will soon be softened. Besides, Porthos cannot owe you much."

"How, not much! Twenty good pistoles already, without reckoning the doctor."

"Never mind. If his mistress abandons him he will find friends. I will answer for it. So, my dear host, be not uneasy, and continue to take all the care of him that his situation requires."

"Monsieur has promised me not to open his mouth about the woman and not to say a word of the wound."

"That's a thing agreed upon. You have my word."

"Oh, he would kill me! I am sure he would!"

"Don't be afraid. He is not so bad as he appears to be."

Saying these words, D'Artagnan went upstairs. At the top of the stairs upon the most conspicuous door of the corridor was traced in black ink a cret. Now, in his projects of intrigue for the future and determined as he was to make his three friends the instruments of his fortune, D'Artagnan was not sorry at getting in his grasp beforehand the invisible strings by which he reckoned upon moving them.

And yet as he journeyed along a profound sadness weighed upon his heart. He thought of young and pretty Mme. Bonacieux. He feared that some serious misfortune had befallen the poor woman. He had no doubt she was a victim of the cardinal's vengeance, and, as was well known, the vengeance of his eminence was terrible.

At the Crevecoeur inn, where he had left Aramis, it was not a host, but a hostess who received him. D'Artagnan was a physiognomist. His eye took in at a glance the plump, cheerful countenance of the mistress of the place, and he at once perceived there was no occasion for dissembling with her.

"My good dame," asked D'Artagnan, "can you tell me what is become of one of my friends whom we were obliged to leave here about twelve days ago?"

"A handsome young man, three or four and twenty years old, mild, amiable and well made?"

"Exactly the man—wounded, moreover, in the shoulder?"

"Just so. Well, monsieur, he is still here!"

"Ah, my dear dame," said D'Artagnan, springing from his horse and throwing the bridle to Planchet, "you restore me to life! Where is this dear Aramis? Let me embrace him! I am quite anxious to see him again."

"I beg your pardon, monsieur, but I doubt whether he can see you at this moment. He is with the cure of Montdidier and the superior of the Jesuits of Amiens. After his illness grace touched him, and he determined to enter into orders. Is monsieur still anxious to see him?"

"More so than ever."

"Well, monsieur has only to take the right hand staircase in the yard and knock at No. 5, on the second floor."

D'Artagnan walked quickly in the direction pointed out and mounted one of those exterior staircases that are still to be seen in the yards of our old fashioned mans. The door opened and D'Artagnan penetrated into the chamber.

Aramis, in a black gown, his head enveloped in a sort of round, flat cap, was seated before an oblong table, covered with rolls of paper and enormous volumes in folio. At his right hand was placed the superior of the Jesuits, and on his left the cure of Montdidier. The curtains were half drawn.

At the noise made by D'Artagnan on entering Aramis lifted up his head and beheld his friend. But to the great astonishment of the young man, the sight of him did not produce much effect upon the musketeer, so completely was his mind detached from the things of this world.

"Good day to you, dear D'Artagnan. Believe me, I am very glad to see you."

"So am I delighted to see you," said D'Artagnan, "but I disturb you, perhaps, my dear Aramis," continued D'Artagnan, "for by what I see I am led to believe you are confessing to these gentlemen."

Aramis colored imperceptibly.

WOMAN'S MOST SUCCESSFUL MEDICINE

Known All Over The World
—Known Only For The Good It Has Done.

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or received so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In nearly every community you will find women who have been restored to health by this famous medicine. Almost every woman you meet knows of the great good it has been doing among suffering women for the past 30 years.

Fox Creek, N. B.—"I have always had pains in the abdomen and a weakness there and often after meals a soreness in my stomach.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better and I can work with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. WILLIAM S. BOURQUE, Fox Creek, N. B.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. gives you the most pain."

"What do you think it is, then?" said Aramis, blushing.

"You have one in your heart, Aramis, one deeper and more painful, a wound made by a woman."

The eye of Aramis kindled in spite of himself.

"Ah," said he, dissembling his emotion under a feigned carelessness, "according to your idea, then, my brain is turned! And for whom—for some one with whom I have trifled in some garison? Fie!"

"I crave your pardon, my dear Aramis, but I thought you aimed higher."

"Higher? And who am I to nourish such ambition? A poor musketeer, a beggar and unknown who hates slavery and finds himself ill placed in the world."

"Alas, my dear Aramis!" said D'Artagnan, in his turn heaving a profound sigh.

"A woman whom I love, whom I adore, has just been torn from me by force. I do not know where she is; I the letter, read it, or, rather, devoured it, his countenance absolutely beaming with delight.

"Thanks, D'Artagnan, thanks!" cried he, almost in a state of delirium. "She was forced to return to Tours. She is not faithless; she still loves me! Dear friend, let me embrace you! Happiness almost stifles me!"

At that moment Bazin entered with the spinach and the omelette.

"Be off, you scoundrel!" cried Aramis, throwing his cap in his face. "Order a larded hare, a fat capon and four bottles of the best Burgundy! Let us drink, my dear D'Artagnan, and while we do so tell me something about what is doing in the world yonder."

CHAPTER XXI.

The Wife of Athos.

"WELL, we have now to search for Athos," said D'Artagnan to the vivacious Aramis when he had informed him of all that had passed since their departure from the capital and a good dinner had made one of them forget his theology and the other his fatigue.

"Do you think, then, that any harm can have happened to him?" asked Aramis. "Athos is so cool, so brave and handles his sword so skillfully."

"There is no doubt of all that. But I fear lest Athos should have been beaten down by a mob of serving men. This is my reason for wishing to set out again as soon as I possibly can."

"I will try to accompany you," said Aramis, "though I scarcely feel in condition to mount on horseback. When do you mean to set out?"

"Tomorrow at daybreak."

"Till tomorrow, then," said Aramis, "for, iron nerved as you are, you must stand in need of repose."

The next morning when D'Artagnan entered Aramis' chamber he found him standing at the window.

"What are you looking at there?" asked D'Artagnan.

"I am admiring three magnificent horses which the stable lads are leading about. It would be a pleasure worthy of a prince to travel upon such horses."

"Well, my dear Aramis, you may enjoy that pleasure, for one of those three horses is yours, with its caparison."

"What, those rich holsters, that velvet housing, that saddle studded with silver, are they all mine? Why, it must have been the king who made you such a present."

"To a certainty it was not the cardinal, but be satisfied that one of them is your property."

"I choose that which the red headed boy is leading."

"Have it, then."

"That is enough to drive away all my pains. I could ride upon him with thirty balls in my body. What handsome stirrups! Holal Bazin, come here this minute."

The two young men and the lackey, went down into the yard.

"Hold my stirrup, Bazin," cried Aramis.

And Aramis sprang into his saddle with his usual grace and lightness, but after a few vaults and curvets of the noble animal his rider felt his pains come on so insupportably that he turned pale and became next day in his bed.

"Ah, he'll come round," thought D'Artagnan, "that's not bad."

"For this gentleman, who is my friend, has just escaped from a serious danger," continued Aramis, with uncton, pointing to D'Artagnan with his hand and addressing the two ecclesiastics. "You arrive very apropos, D'Artagnan, and by taking part in our discussion may assist us with your intelligence. M. le Principal of Amiens, M. le Cure of Montdidier, and I are arguing upon certain theological questions with which we have been much interested."

"Work slowly," said the cure. "We leave you in an excellent tone of mind until tomorrow."

"Yes; the ground is all sown," said the Jesuit. "You promise to become one of the lights of the church."

Aramis conducted them to the foot of the stairs and then immediately came up again to D'Artagnan.

"You see," said he, "that I am returned to my original ideas. These plans of retreat have been formed for a long time. You have often heard me speak of them, have you not, my friend?"

"Yes, but I must confess that I always thought you were joking. But I have eaten nothing since 10 o'clock this morning, and I am hungry."

"We will dine directly, my friend, only you must please to remember that this is Friday. Now, on such a day I cannot eat meat or see it eaten. If you can be satisfied with my dinner, it consists of cooked spinach and fruits. On your account I will add some eggs, and that is a serious infraction of the rule, for eggs are meat, since they engender chickens."

"And so, Aramis, you are decidedly going into the church? What will our two friends say? What will M. de Treville say? They will treat you as a deserter, I warn you."

"I do not enter the church; I re-enter it. I deserted the church for the world, for you know that I committed violence upon myself when I became a musketeer."

"Who-I? I know nothing about it."

"You don't know how I quitted the seminary?"

"Not at all."

"This is my history then." And Aramis told D'Artagnan how he had been compelled to leave the theological seminary after killing a man in a duel fought about a woman. He continued:

"Athos, whose acquaintance I made about that period, and Porthos, who had taught me some effective tricks of fence, prevailed upon me to solicit the uniform of a musketeer. The king entertained great regard for my father, who had fallen at the siege of Arras, and the uniform was granted. You may understand that the moment is arrived for me to re-enter into the bosom of the church. This wound, my dear D'Artagnan, has been a warning to me from heaven."

"This wound? Bah! It is nearly healed, and I am sure that it is not that which at the present moment have no means of ascertaining where she has been taken to. She is perhaps a prisoner; she is perhaps dead!"

"Yes, but you have at least this consolation, that you can say to yourself she has not quitted you voluntarily, while I!"

"While what?"

"Nothing," replied Aramis, "nothing."

"So you renounce the world, then, forever; that is a settled thing; a resolution decreed?"

"Forever! You are my friend today, tomorrow you will be no more to me than a shadow, or, rather, even you will no longer exist for me. As for the world, it is a sepulcher and nothing else."

"Well, then, let us say no more about it," said D'Artagnan, "and let us burn this letter, which, no doubt, announces to you some fresh infidelity of your servant maid."

"What letter?" cried Aramis eagerly.

"A letter which was sent to your abode in your absence and which was given to me for you."

"But from whom is that letter?"

"Oh, from some heartbroken waiting woman of Mme. de Chevreuse, perhaps, who was obliged to return to Tours with her mistress and who in order to appear smart and attractive, stole some perfumed paper and sealed her letter with a duchess' coronet."

"What do you say?"

"Well, I really think I must have lost it," said the young man maliciously, while pretending to search for it.

"D'Artagnan, D'Artagnan," cried Aramis, "you are killing me!"

"Well, here it is at last!" said D'Artagnan as he drew the letter from his pocket.

Aramis sprang toward him, seized with his usual grace and agility, but after a few vaults and curvets of the noble animal his rider felt his pains come on so insupportably that he turned pale and became unsteady in his seat. D'Artagnan caught him in his arms and assisted him to his chamber.

"That's well, my dear Aramis; take care of yourself," said he. "I will go alone in search of Athos."

"You are a man of brass," replied Aramis.

"No; I have good luck, that is all. But how do you mean to pass your time till I come back? No more theology!"

They took leave of each other and in ten minutes, after commending his friend to the cares of the hostess and Bazin, D'Artagnan was trotting along in the direction of Amiens.

How was he going to find Athos, even should he find him at all? The position in which he had left him was critical. He might very probably have succumbed. This idea, while darkening his brow, drew several sighs from him and caused him to formulate to himself a few vows of vengeance. Of all his friends Athos was the eldest and the least resembling him in appearance, in his tastes and sympathies. And yet he entertained a marked preference for this gentleman. The noble and distinguished air of Athos, those flashes of greatness which from time to time broke out from the shade in which he voluntarily kept himself, that unalterable equality of temper which made him the most pleasant companion in the world, that forced gaiety, that bravery which might have been termed blind if it had not been the result of the rarest coolness—such qualities attracted more than the esteem, more than the friendship, of D'Artagnan; they attracted his admiration.

"Well," thought D'Artagnan, "poor Athos is perhaps at this moment dead, and dead by my fault, for it was I who dragged him into this affair."

And these thoughts redoubled the eagerness of D'Artagnan, who excited his horse, which stood in need of no excitement, and they proceeded at a rapid pace. About 11 o'clock in the morning they perceived Amiens, and at half past 11 they were at the door of the inn.

D'Artagnan had often meditated against the perfidious host one of those hearty vengeance which offer consolation while being hoped for. He entered the hostelry with his hat pulled over his eyes, his left hand on the pommel of the sword, and cracking his whip with his right hand.

"Do you remember me?" said he to the host, who advanced, bowing, toward him.

"I have not that honor, monsieur," replied the latter, his eyes being dazzled by the brilliant style in which D'Artagnan traveled.

QUEEN LIKED "DIZZY" MOST.

Late Queen Victoria's Favorite Premier Was Lord Beaconsfield.

It is a popular belief that "Dizzy" was the Prime Minister whom Queen Victoria liked most, while Gladstone "got on her nerves," to quote one authority. It would appear, however, from Dr. Boyd Carpenter's reminiscences, that Sir Robert Peel was her late Majesty's favorite Minister, and that Lord Salisbury was regarded by her with almost equal admiration. When at Osborne one evening Dr. Carpenter asked Queen Victoria whether she regarded Lord Beaconsfield's novel, "Coningsby," as a book which gave a fairly correct picture of English life of the time. Says the bishop:

"She looked a little blank for a moment, as though hardly knowing what reply to make. Then she pursed her lips and said, in her quizzical way, 'I didn't care for his novels.' This led to a conversation about Lord Beaconsfield's powers. 'Yes,' he was, in the view of the Queen, an able man, with a fine imagination; 'Yes—great, but not so great as the present'—i.e., Lord Salisbury, then Prime Minister.

"She went on to speak of her Prime Ministers. The two who held high place in her mind, as she spoke, were Sir Robert Peel and Lord Salisbury. She spoke with very warm and grateful affection of Sir Robert Peel, referring to the kindness he showed and the trouble he took at the time Osborne was secured as a royal residence. 'We owed it to him that we got this place.'"

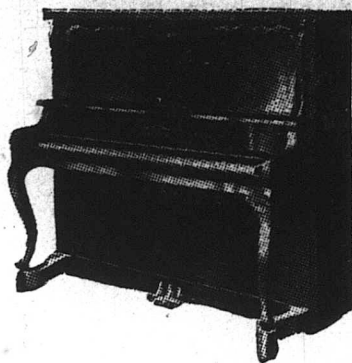

Dr. Carpenter, by the way, tells an interesting story illustrating Queen Victoria's interest in all kinds of domestic details. Her Majesty was god-mother to one of his children. "but," he says, "she knew the names and ages of all of them, and there were eleven of them. Indeed, on one occasion she set me right about the age of my youngest boy. 'How old is your little boy now?' she asked me one evening at Windsor. I answered, with true fatherly doubtfulness, 'I think about nine, your Majesty.' 'No,' she promptly said, 'he is ten.' And the Queen was right. This was in 1897."

A Prudent Editor.

In a record of Dr. Mamerie's life and work we find this story, with which he once concluded a sermon:

When Dr. William Smith was bringing out his Biblical dictionary, being a prudent editor and understanding the taste of the public extremely well, he determined that the articles should contain as much science as was compatible with orthodoxy and no more. The one on "The Deluge" was to be written by a man whom the doctor considered safe, but when it was finished it turned out to be quite heterodox. There was no time to procure another, as that part of the dictionary had to appear at once, so when people looked for "Deluge" they discovered only "See Flood." A fresh writer was then found, but when his article was returned it was worse than the first. It was not allowed to appear; Dr. Smith simply wrote: "Flood, see Noah." How he managed with this article I don't know.

The Life Story of a Sow.

To get the full flavor of this anecdote, which occurs in Watt's "Edinburgh and the Lothians," you must know Edinburgh's Cowgate and its curious buildings. It happened to Dr. Guthrie, after whom a street in the neighborhood, inclosing part of the Horse Wynd and College Wynd, is named. Dr. Guthrie had climbed to the summit of a tall "land" one day on a charitable visit. When he enter-

During the Boer war of 1881 one of the sentries of a British regiment, having been found asleep at his post, was tried by court martial and condemned to be shot. At the appointed time he was marched to a spot outside the camp, and the troops were drawn up to witness the execution of the unfortunate man. Just as the officer in charge was about to give the order to fire a bullet flew into the group of officers and men, and the prisoner fell dead at their feet. The shot was from the rifle of a concealed Boer marksman. In "sniping" the British troops he had unwittingly acted as executioner.

A Blanket Fight.

A strange custom prevails among the Indians of Alaska. When a difference arises between two of them, and a friendly settlement seems impossible, one of them threatens the other with dishonor. He executes his threat by tearing up a certain number of his own blankets. The only way his antagonist can get even with him is by tearing up a greater number of his own. The one who destroys the most blankets is regarded as having won the fight.

Guthrie, after whom a street in the neighborhood, inclosing part of the Horse Wynd and College Wynd, is named. Dr. Guthrie had climbed to the summit of a tall "land" one day on a charitable visit. When he entered the room he perceived a sow, of which the family seemed very proud. "However did you get that great animal upstairs?" asked the doctor, panting after his climb. "Ay, but it never was down!" was the laconic and conclusive reply.

Precocious Fox.

Charles James Fox is probably the only man who ever made a maiden speech in the House of Commons while still a youth in his teens. He was nineteen when he took his seat for Midhurst, and within a few months he had made three excellent speeches. And yet even at this early age Fox used frequently to sit up all night drinking and gambling.

The Spoiled Thrill.

In his book of reminiscences the Right Rev. Dr. Boyd-Carpenter tells a story of a missionary meeting that was being held in a small village in England.

The vicar of the parish, Mr. Ingham, was a very energetic man. Indeed, his energy was deemed by some of his parishioners as somewhat intrusive. At the meeting a missionary gave a vivid account of the cannibal habits of some tribe to which missionaries had gone and among whom some had met their death.

The missionary described a native feast. He told how at the feast a large pie had appeared. Desirous of reaching the climax of the tragedy by slow stages of heightening interest, he dwelt upon the pie and then upon its central ornament. What was it? A finger—a human finger.

"And whose finger do you think it was?" he demanded in thrilling tones, and paused dramatically.

The chance was too good to be missed, and one of the villagers promptly told him, "I'll warrant it were Parson Ingham's finger, for he has it in everybody's pie."

When Royalty Dances.

Royal etiquette is a little cumbersome in these democratic days. In England not only may no ordinary guest dance while the great ladies of the royal family are doing so, but gentlemen must make a point of standing, however far they may be removed from the royal circle. This is according to a writer in The Gentlewoman, who goes on to say:

"I once saw two young men sharply reprimanded by a court official because they continued sitting in animated conversation when the Queen began to dance. In fact, so marked was the rebuke that I don't think either is likely to have to learn his lesson a second time."

Moon Causes Rain In Africa.

A new instance of the supposed connection of the moon with rainfall claims the support of highly scientific authority. Heavy rains are said to occur in South Africa at intervals of nineteen years, and this period coincides with the lunar cycle of maximum north and south declinations. E. E. Nevill, late director of the Natal observatory, finds an explanation in the moon's attraction. The theory is that a permanent cloud belt is drawn along by the moon and that as the moon nears its furthest point north the mass of clouds is made to impinge on the mountains in Natal, giving excessive rainfall.

Cow Diseases. First Article.

These are a terrible torment at times and have much to do with the lessening of the milk flow. The cows are so worried and so busy fighting the flies lose much of the time they feeding, and it is their semi-condition that largely causes trouble in flesh and milk.
Nothing should be done to rid the cows of this fly pest.
A blowing mixture has been found effective and less expensive than any of the fly remedies on the market. A solution of fish or seal oil or old any kind, one pint of coal oil and two ounces (four tablespoons) of crude carbolic acid.

Mix together and apply with a spray to all parts except the udder. Put it on after milking the strong odor getting into the air. In dry weather one application is usually sufficient. If the cows are in a heavy rain it will try to go over them again.
This fly remedy is ten parts of oil of creosote to one part of pine oil and apply with a brush once or twice a week to the cows attacked. This is splendid remedy from the horn fly.

turns head to one side and eyes close or lies flat with extremities extended.

Treatment.—It is usually a fatal mistake to dose for milk fever. In many cases the muscles of the throat are paralyzed, and the cow, having no power to swallow, the medicine given goes into the lungs and often causes death.

The treatment giving prompt relief in the severest cases and one to be relied on is filling the udder with pure oxygen or with common air by means of a bicycle pump or a rubber bulb syringe and a common milk syphon or similar tube. Pump the udder as full as possible and put a rubber band around the teats, or tie with tape to keep in the air. Massage the udder so as to force the air to all parts. It may be necessary to repeat the inflation.

This treatment usually effects a cure in a few hours. Do not give any medicine.

Mammitis—Caked Udder—Inflammation of Udder—Garget.

Symptoms.—Usually at first the milk is watery and sometimes discolored with blood and may contain clotted, curdy matter, and the part affected is swollen and painful. In severe cases the cow will have a chill, and the limbs, ears and horns become cold then fever will follow and the udder becomes hot, swollen and hard. The milk flow decreases or stops. The cow eats but little and does not chew her cud.

Treatment.—Give oxygen treatment as described for milk fever and a good dose of salts. If the udder remains hard rub well with goose grease or camphorated oil. When the entire udder is caked take a piece of heavy

Diarrhea or Scours in Calves.
Cause—Overfeeding, sudden changes in feed, filthy, wet stalls, dirty feed pails, etc.

Treatment.—A cup of strong black tea is said to be good. Others give from one to two ounces of castor oil and one teaspoonful of laudanum.
Feed new milk and keep everything clean. Four or five hours after the oil is given a teaspoonful of a mixture of one part salol and two parts subnitrate of bismuth may be given in half a pint of milk or the powder placed on the tongue and washed down with a little milk. A simple remedy is to add to the milk one-fifth of its bulk of lime water.

VETERINARY LORE.

Proper Method of Treating Cuts and Bruises on the Horse.

The shoulders of work horses often become chafed and sore in spring because owners do not give them proper attention, says A. S. Alexander, M. D.
C., in the Farm Journal. Fit the collar to the shoulder. Some folks think that any old collar will do and that all collars are of the same size and pattern. A new collar steeped in hot water and fitted to the shoulder will, when it dries out, be of proper shape. The hand should easily slip between the shoulder and collar when the latter is in place. Keep the collar clean and dry. Sweat, hair and dandruff mat upon the inside of the collar when the horse is at work and dry there at noon.
Remove the collar, sponge it clean and set it in the sun to dry. Do not wet it, but wipe or sponge off with sweet oil.
Remove the harness at noon. It is cruel to leave it on the horse.

He should also have his shoulders sponged off with cold water at noon and at night. If they are tender, bathe them with a strong tea of white oak bark or with strong alum water or with a solution of half an ounce of tannic acid to a gallon of cold water.
If sores form smear them with an ointment made of one dram each of iodoform, tannic acid and boric acid to an ounce of lanolin, vaseline or unsalted lard. If a large "bunch" forms it contains pus deep down under the levator humeri muscle and will have to be liberated by cutting; then pack the cavity once daily with oakum saturated in a mixture of equal parts of raw linseed oil and turpentine. This will prevent the formation of a fibroid tumor. Where a tumor has formed it will have to be cut out. Afterward pack as above directed.

If the top of the neck tends to become sore do not clip off the mane.
That aggravates the trouble, for the short, strong bristles are pressed into the sore skin by the collar. Wash the parts clean and paint three times daily with a lotion composed of two ounces of tincture of iodine and six ounces of extract of witch hazel. Often a patch of skin dies, becomes horny and thick and then is known as a "sitfast." Pus exudes from around this sitfast. It must be cleanly cut out or healing will not take place. After the operation swab with tincture of iodine every other day, and two or three times a day apply white lotion.

White lotion is made by mixing together in a pint of soft, cold water
one ounce of sugar of lead and six

about "Fruit-a-lives" that it might seem unnecessary for me to add my experience.

But "Fruit-a-lives" were so beneficial to me when I suffered with distressing Dyspepsia, that I feel called upon to inform you of the remarkable and satisfactory results I have had from using them.

Dyspepsia and Indigestion as everyone knows, can give you more uncomfort-complaints.

"I am glad to be able to say to you that although in the past I suffered excruciating agony with Dyspepsia, I am now in perfect health.

"Fruit-a-lives" accomplished the desired result and I have to thank them for my very favorable and satisfactory state of health" N. C. STIRLING.

Slimy or Ropy Milk (Not a Disease).

Milk which becomes stringy, slimy or ropy after standing awhile is not due to the cow's condition, but is caused by a large number of bacteria which develop in the milk and change the milk sugar into a slimy or ropy mass. The bacteria usually come from dust or bad water and get into the milk at milking time or afterward.

Thoroughly clean and disinfect the stable and scald all milk pails, strainers, cans, etc.

Lumps in Teats.

If the lump or tumor be near the point or halfway up the teat a veterinarian may operate successfully;
otherwise it is well to beef the cow, as she will not improve and her of-spring may be similarly affected.

Cowpox.

Symptoms.—Teats very sore, break out in pimples and form scabby sores.
A troublesome contagious disease, and the cow should be isolated.

A milker can take it from one cow to another on his hands or clothes.

Remedy.—Dress the sores three times a day with an ointment made by mixing four drams boracic acid, twenty drops of carbolic acid, with two ounces of vaseline.

If the teats are very sore it may be well to use a teat siphon to draw the milk.

day apply white lotion.

White lotion is made by mixing together in a pint of soft, cold water
one ounce of sugar of lead and six drams of sulphate of zinc. For use in dy time add one dram of pure carbolic acid. Label the bottle "poison" and shake it well before using. This is a fine lotion for application to all shallow wounds, such as surface barb wire wounds and sore shoulders and necks.
It is a drying lotion and makes the wound scab over. The scab should not be rubbed off. Healing goes on under the scab.

When a wound heals tardily swab it with tincture of iodine two or three times a week. If it tends to form proud flesh do not apply burnt alum or powdered blue stone (sulphate of copper). Better rub it lightly with lunar caustic pencil (nitrate of silver) and then apply the following lotion which we have found useful for large barb wire wounds which fill up with granular tissue and tend to leave a large, unsightly scar: Two ounces of sulphate of zinc, half an ounce of chloride of zinc, one dram of hydrochloric acid (dilute), one pint of soft, cold water, caramel, sufficient to color brown. Label "poison." Shake before using. This is a very strong solution and should be used carefully.

Wean the Foal Gradually.

Don't let the colt go to pieces at weaning time. Wean gradually. Give him good feed—oats are best—and the run of the pasture. Make the change from the dam's milk to grain and pasture gradually. Don't keep the colt tied up in a short, dirty barn. A lot or small pasture surrounded by smooth or woven wire or board fence is the ideal place for exercise.

Pure Breed Stock Pays.

As long as a beef animal is only fed enough to maintain life there will be no increase in weight and no profit.
Under these conditions a scrub is just as good. But when properly fed and cared for the superiority of the pure bred becomes at once apparent in quick maturity and flesh production.

Immortal.

Truth crushed to earth will rise again.
Though bruised and maimed and sore,
The old steam roller passes by,
And up it gets once more.

TIPS FOR AUTOMOBILES

A List of Rules Given Out For Their Guidance.

1. On discovering an approaching team the automobilist must stop off side and cover his machine with a tarpaulin painted to correspond with the scenery.

2. The speed limit on country roads this year will be a secret and the penalty for violation will be $10 for every mile an offender is caught going in excess of it.

3. In case an automobile makes a team run away the penalty will be $50 for the first mile, $100 for the second mile, $200 for the third mile, etc., that the teams runs, in addition to the usual charges for damages.

4. On approaching a corner where he cannot command a view of the road ahead the automobilist must stop not less than 100 yards from the turn, toot his horn, ring a bell, fire a revolver, halloo, and send up three bombs at intervals of five minutes.

5. Automobiles must be seasonably painted—that is, so they will agree with the pastoral ensemble and not be startling. They must be green in spring, golden in summer, red in autumn, and white in winter.

6. Automobiles running on country roads at night must send up a red rocket every mile and wait ten minutes for the road to clear. They may then proceed carefully, blowing their horn and shooting Roman candles.

7. In case an automobile comes up behind and wants to pass, the farmer will affect deafness until the automobilist calls him a hard name.

8. All members of society will give up Sunday to chasing automobiles, shooting and shouting at them, making arrests and otherwise discouraging country touring on that day.

9. In case a horse will not pass an automobile, notwithstanding the scenic tarpaulin, the automobilist will take the machine apart as rapidly as possible and conceal the parts in the grass.

10. In case an automobile approaches a farmer's house when the roads are dusty, it will slow down to one mile an hour and the chauffeur will lay the dust in front of the house with a hand sprinkler, worked over the dashboard.

Story That Will Never Die.

The remarkable following enjoyed by Charles Klein's "The Lion and the Mouse," throughout the country, seems to be more intense than ever before, if reports received from points visited this season are to be credited. There can be little doubt as to the local interest as a large number of inquiries have already been made at the Brisco Opera House regarding the seats for the United Play Company's production of this far famed drama on Thursday, Oct. 10th. Mr. Klein struck the chord of popular spirit with the same sympathetic dexterity shown by the composer of a certain waltz which recently enjoyed almost as wide an acquaintance as the theme of this drama of finance. Music spreads with more speed, and its welcome is worn out by constant practice, but such a story of revelation as told by Mr. Klein in "The Lion and the Mouse" will live on and be remembered throughout the business world for a long time to come. It is too true to life to escape a long practical existence. The United Play Company is said to have employed unusual skill in filling the organization to be seen here and this insures highly artistic performance.

Plowman's Association.

Death Through the Wreck.

Mrs. Brown, who was killed in the B. of Q. accident near Kingston on Wednesday was the first passenger to loose her life on the Bay of Quinte Railway. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Warner, of Camden township, and was born in Camden East, about 49 years ago. Since her marriage to Alfred Brown twenty-four years ago, they resided on the farm one mile from Moscow. Deceased was a member of the Friends church. The remains were taken to her home at five o'clock on Thursday morning. Three brothers and three sisters survive, besides her husband, namely: James of Camden, Myres, of Yarker, John, of Harrowsmith; Mrs. A. Cambridge, of Napanee; Mrs. P. Knapp, of Watertown, N. Y.; and Mrs. E. Attwood, of San Francisco, Cal.

Grace Methodist Church.

Rally Day services were held last Sunday in Grace Methodist Church for the benefit of the Sunday School, which is such a prominent feature of the work of this church. The Rally Day service as arranged was largely followed, the theme being, "Building a Nation for God." The church had been tastefully decorated with autumn leaves by the members of Mrs. Scott's class. The Rev. S. T. Bartlett, General Secretary of the Sunday Schools and Epworth Leagues of the Methodist Church, was present and delivered two splendid addresses. Three thoughts were prominent all day, the Bible, the Flag and the Sunday School. The morning service was largely attended by members of the school. The speaker of the day remarked in his address that this Church has a larger number of its members of the congregation attending the school than any church of its size in Ontario. The promotion exercises were among the most interesting parts of the morning service. The teachers of the primary department are to be congratulated on the work shown by the children on this occasion; it was simply perfect. One of the beautiful, but pathetic features of the day was when special messengers were called to the platform and commissioned by the school to carry bouquets of roses to some members of the school and home department who were seriously ill. These fragrant tributes of loving memory were sent during the rally hour. The superintendent, Mr. Chas. Eyvel, must be congratulated on the splendid response to his rally call, although the weather was so inclement. A large congregation assembled for the evening service. Rev. Mr. Bartlett continued the theme of the morning, "Building a Nation for God," the essential place the Bible holds in this great work. It was a well thought out, eloquent presentation of the theme. The impression made on the large number of young men and women assembled must bear fruit for the good of the nation. Rev. Mr. Bartlett is no stranger to Napanee and his visits are always welcome.
